The keynote address will be delivered by Utah state Sen. Greg Bell, former chairman of a initiative in the Salt Lake region known as "Envision Utah." The nationally acclaimed program, in its eighth year, has focused public attention on growth and land-use issues in a region that is similar to the Upstate.

Bell's speech will be preceded by the presentation of the initial findings of a growth impact study for the Upstate by Dr. Barry Nocks of the Clemson University Center for Community Growth and Change.

The conference is free and open to the public.
